

Abstract

In this thesis, we study modelling of mortality in high ages by several approaches. Some of mentioned models take into account the phenomenon of mortality deceleration. Further, we present several ways of estimating of exposed to risk in (almost) extinct cohorts. We focus especially on the survivor ratio method but we also mention the MD method and the DG method. Finally, we perform a numerical study.